

ICT FOR TEACHING: A practical course to incorporate Information Technology into Teaching (literacy, numeracy, science, etc.)

Location: Dublin (Ireland) / Leeds (England) / Jaén (Spain)

TARGET AUDIENCE

Teachers (Pre-school, primary, secondary, vocational, adult, special needs)

FULL DESCRIPCION OF TRAINING CONTENT

The aim of the course is to enable participants to use ICT in class and apply the acquired skills to exploiting and creating ICT resources for teaching and learning. Participants will learn how to work with free educational as well as easy-access software to develop basic techniques such as image and sound editing, digital storytelling creation, etc., by using a wide range of tools such as Podcasting, Movie Making, Web 2.0, Social Networking, Blogging, ePortfolio, Wikis, Webquests, etc. These tools will support and enhance language, mathematics, science, etc. teaching and learning, through interdisciplinary inquiry and the use and creation of digital teaching resources.

Objectives:

- To provide teachers with practical guidance to the use of a range of ICT tools and how to integrate them into teaching and learning processes with their students.
- To reflect on how ICT can enhance students' learning and can help them to reach learning objectives within the curriculum.
- To help teachers to design and implement motivating activities for their students by using ICT within a new framework of multiliteracies and critical literacy principles.
- To help participants to develop their communication skills in English.

Methodology:

Participants will enjoy hands-on workshops, interactive sessions, collaborative group work and reflective journaling. This methodology should enable them to use ICT in class and to exploit and create ICT resources for teaching and learning. Teachers will also have sessions to analyze ways in which Information and Communication Technology can redefine the concept of critical literacy in class and its implications for students' learning.

TYPE OF CERTIFICATION OF ATTENDANCE AWARDED
