Allowing yourself to spend enriching days in full contact with Icelandic society and culture and combining this with pedagogic encounters with schools, will bring you an in-depth understanding of the Icelandic education system.

The way in which students are educated can be a window to a deeper vision of a society. This can also lead to reflection on why a society educates its people in a certain way and may encourage you to see your own education system from a refreshed perspective.

This combination of elements will help build a holistic vision of education and culture in Iceland from several enriching perspectives.

A NOTE on the Icelandic education system

The Icelandic education system is probably one of the most interesting in Europe. The system is firmly committed to equal opportunities for all and is built around fundamental pillars such as literacy in the widest sense, education towards sustainability, health and welfare, democracy and human rights, equity, and creativity. Approximately 74 percent of Icelanders under the age of 29 participate in Iceland's formal education system.

In recent years, the overarching goals of the Icelandic education system have been to promote and preserve culture, history, and Icelandic language and ensure that Icelandic education is comparable to the education provided by the world's leading nations. Objectives have been clarified and the curriculum is totally focused on the achievement of these goal, receiving broad popular support. Icelanders have always placed great emphasis on being the third most literate nation in the world, with a 99 percent literacy rate, behind only Finland and Norway.

LOCATION of the course: Reykjavík (ICELAND)

Iceland is defined as the land of fire and ice, volcanically and geologically active: lava beds, volcanoes, geysers, hot springs, glaciers, and powerful rivers and waterfalls on the Mid-Atlantic Ridge where the North American and Eurasian tectonic plates come together. The country has a population of about three hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants.

Reykjavík is the country's capital and largest city and the northernmost capital in the world. The clean air, the pure fresh water, or the popular thermal pools in the city, contribute to a warm feeling of well-being that people tend to experience during their visit. Reykjavik is also the gateway to the fascinating nature of Iceland, such as the Northern Lights or the Golden Circle with its geysers, waterfalls, lava valleys and glaciers.
